

Why is Slip Resistance Necessary in Commercial and Industrial Flooring?

Slip-resistant floors help to protect against very costly slip-and-fall accidents. These accidents are the number one cause of deaths in the workplace and the costs for these accidents in the U.S. is $70billion/year. While, on average, costs $30,000 - $40,000/year, a recent accident cost over 1.2M.

In addition to these costs, companies also risk:

- Workers Compensation claims
- OSHA Audits and resulting fines
- Lost productivity
- Reputational damage

There is no need to risk these expensive fees when a slip-resistant cost-effective, easy-to-install option is now available.

The Alternative

Many commercial and industrial buildings contain slippery polished concrete or tile that offer little-to-no slip resistance. When combined with poor weather conditions, workers carrying materials, uneven, cracked or loose areas, these types of flooring are accidents waiting to happen. An alternative is WorldProof Products' FiberFlex® product line, which features the highest coefficient of friction available today.

FiberFlex® far exceeds required standards, whether dry or wet:
